Name: _____

In French, there are many different ways to write/say the words: A (as in a banana)

The (as in the ball)

Every noun (person, place, thing) has a gender. There is no easy way to know if something is masculine (masc.) or feminine (fem.)

If you want to translate the word banana, you need to search up either...

- A potato or...
  → une pomme de terre
- The potato
  → la pomme de terre
- The potatoes
  → les pomme de terres

$$A = \frac{masc}{un} / \frac{fem}{une}$$

$$The = \frac{masc}{le} / \frac{fem}{la}$$

	un \n A \n (masculine)	une \n A \n (féminine)	le \n The \n (masculine)	la \n The \n (féminine)	les \n The \n (plural)
Pear (poire)	/	une poire	/	la poire	les poires
Book (livre)		/		/
Horse (chaval)		/		/

Category: Sports

	A (masculine)	A (féminine)	The (masculine)	The (féminine)	The (plural)
Hockey ↳
Tennis ↳ Basketball ↳
Baseball ↳ Golf ↳

your own ↓

↳