Creating Your Citation

Go to this link: <https://www.bibme.org/mla>

I've selected MLA for you! When you get there, you will see this:

The screenshot shows the Bibme website interface. At the top, there are four buttons for citation styles: APA, MLA (highlighted in blue), Chicago, and More +. Below these are five buttons for source types: Journal, Website (circled in red), Book, Video, and Other. A search bar is present with the placeholder text "Find a website by url or keyword" and a yellow "Search Website" button. Below the search bar, there are two options: "Auto-fill mode" and "Manual entry mode".

Choose your source of information: journal, website, etc. Notice, "Website" has been selected.

Copy and paste your website into this bar.

- Once you hit "Search Website", you will be shown the title of your web page. If that is the right page, hit "Select".

Flowering Plant

Select

- You will then be given all your citation data, necessary for creating a citation.
- Look over the information then hit "Final Step".
- Your online citation information will be organized for you. If you need to add/change anything, you can do so manually. There is unlikely anything to change, so just hit "Create Citation".
- You may be shown an option to pay for the service. Don't pay for anything; allow ads!! You may have to watch one before the citation is made for you. No biggie!
- Here is your citation!! From here, copy and paste (make the selection) and paste into a new document, which you will title "Bibliography".
- In this new document, you must create a list of citations that is alphabetized by the first word, for example: "Flowering..."

Here's what we found!
